

In 1999, Margaret Edson won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama for her one-act play, "Wit," that details the hospital experience of a brilliant English professor undergoing chemotherapy for metastatic ovarian cancer. The play is not only a moving account of the patient experience, but through Vivian's reflections on her life through the intricacies of the English language, a linguistic delight.

Art&Humanites@HMS is excited to present a dramatic reading of excerpts of this play by students from both Harvard Medical School and the American Repertory Theater. All are invited to join for an evening of drama, discussion, and music, followed by a lovely reception.

WHAT: Dramatic reading of W;t
Performed by HMS & ART students
Followed by music, discussion and a lovely reception!

WHEN: Tuesday September 17, 6:00-8:00 pm

WHERE: Tosteson Medical Education Center (TMEC),
Room 227, 260 Longwood Avenue, Boston

Thanks to the generous support from the American Repertory Theater, Art&Humanites@HMS, and the Ackerman Program on Medicine & Culture at Harvard Medical School.

ACKERMAN

PROGRAM ON MEDICINE & CULTURE

